Not to be confused with the episode or set. DragonsFirst Spinjitzu Master (formerly)WuNinja FireIceLightningEarthWind[1] The Firstbourne is the first existing and legendary Mother of All Dragons. She lives in the Land of Oni and Dragons and lives in her nest most of the time. A long time ago, the first Spinjitzu master befriended Firstbourne, and with her help, forged the Dragon's Armor. Firstbourne has protected its dragons over the years, primarily from Iron Baron and his barbarian hunters. After many of her dragons were captured, Firstbourne attacked Dead's End and freed its captive offspring before returning to her nest. Later, Iron Baron forced Wu to lead him to Firstbourne's nest, believing he could claim the Dragon's Armor and control it with it. After claiming the armor, the Baron learns that this was a ruse, and Firstbourne envelops him in molten rock. After Wu donates the Dragon Armor, he and Ninja fly to Firstbourne and her dragons back to Ninjago, where they stage a final battle against Lord Garmadon and his forces. After the battle, Firstbourne returns to her homeland. History passed at one time, the first Spinjitzu Master befriended her, then together they made Dragon Armor. After that, they tried to stop the war in the Land of The Oni and Dragons. Master Spinjitzu realized then that the war could not be stopped and left the land. Firstbourne remained in the land and protected Master Spinjitzu's Dragon Armor, always believing that one day he would return for her. Much later, Iron Baron tried to hunt her down, but she took her leg and arm as a result. However, Heavy Metal was able to take Blade Dragonbone from it. Since then, Baron has groomed a vendetta against Firstbourne and leads his hunters in search of her revenge. Hunted to build a dragon during the Ninjas captivity, Jay remembers what Wu told him the first time he met him and decide to make a mech that looks like a dragon, which hunters will believe is Firstbourne to help. Over the next few days, Cole and Wu build the dragon with contraband pieces by hiding them in dragon dung and take them before they drop it. Later that night, Wu flew the Dragon mech before a shot at Iron Baron bearing her tail off and real Firstbourne seemed to save her children. Ninja initially mistook it for their mech until they realized the truth and were shocked to see it up close. As he fired through the camps, Wu and Ninja distract Kai from freeing the dragons before they come out themselves. Iron Baron shouted that the dragon was punishing them for hunting their descendants. The freed dragons then flew to their mother and managed to escape the Hunters. Lessons for a Master Iron Baron forced Wu to lead him to Firstbourne's nest, where the dragon's sacred armor is guarded. Finally, arriving in the nest and locate the armor. Iron Baron rushes to procure it, and does so just like wakes up and stands up in front of him. The Baron hastily throws away the armor and commands the Firstbourne to kill Wu. However, Wu reveals that he lied about the armor that has control of Firstbourne, and revealed that she had instead felt the good in her father's heart, which allowed her to tame her. After feeling the evil of Iron Baron, which plucks the armor, Firstbourne unleashes a stream of molten rock and wraps it in it. Firstbourne observes Wu and feels the good in his heart so he did with his father. Wu soon puts on armor and allies with Firstbourne and her family of dragons. He flies Firstbourne out of the nest and reunited with Ninja and Dragon Hunters. After ninja board dragons of their own, they fly to return to Ninjago. Green Destiny Ninja flies back into Ninjago through a crack in the sky, with Wu driving to Firstbourne. They went where Lloyd, Nya and Dareth were fighting Garmadon's Sons and sent the bikers away. After the team evacuated people from the surrounding areas, Wu and Lloyd flew firstbourne to Borg Tower, where they confronted Lord Garmadon. The three began to fight, with Firstbourne eventually intervening and triggering a stream of molten rock. Garmadon was incapacitated, but he freed himself and unleashed an explosion of destructive energy. Wu was sent flying to the streets below and was rescued by Firstbourne. While Lloyd continued to fight his father, Wu flew with Firstbourne to Colossus and helped Ninja and their dragons defeat him. After the successful battle to overthrow Garmadon and his forces, Wu said goodbye to Firstbourne, as she would soon return to the First Land. March of the Oni The Darkness Comes The First Realm was attacked by Oni, and Firstbourne barely managed to escape with Faith. They traveled to Ninjago and fell unconscious. Wu helped them get better, and Faith told Wu about the Oni invasion. Faith's endings told Wu and Misako about what happened in The Land of The Oni and dragons. Oni attacked the kingdom and the hunters try to defend themselves with the help of the Dragons, but only Faith and Firstbourne managed to escape. After the Ninjas were victorious, Firstbourne is completely healed and flew over the monastery while Ninja and their allies celebrate. Shintaro (painting) Trivia In the hunted trailer, when she is using an elementary power, she can shine to the color of the element (When she used the fire she was shining in a red-orange color, but when she used ice she was in a light blue-white color). She is is The first dragon to guard a gold artifact made by First Master Spinjitzu, a similar duty that her children: Rocky, Shard, Wisp and Flame would do in Ninjago as guardians of the Golden Weapons. She bonded with the First Master Spinjitzu and, together with her fire and metal, created the Dragon's Armor and sought to unite the two races and the kingdom with them to end their war. They went through the sky only with the respect they had for each other. After the two sides refused to end the war, First Master Spinjitzu left Oni land and the Dragons and continued to create Ninjago, leaving Firstbourne behind to guard the Dragon Armor. Firstbourne appears in Green and Gold and flies with Ultra Dragon and other dragons. She controls every element of her beloved eggs (Fire, Ice, Lightning, Earth and Wind). Although it has the four elements that combine to form the following powers, it does not control Creation, Energy, or Golden Power. [2] According to Tommy Andreasen, Firstbourne does not have all the elements, but will not exclude him. Firstbourne's name is based on the first born term because she was the first dragon. The Firstbourne is the oldest known character in the series. Promotional Media Gallery in LEGO Ninjago: Masters of Spinjitzu References Lord Garmadon (formerly)Ninja (in short) After the creation of sixteen Skulkin realms (also called Skeleton Army) are an army of skeletons from the Underworld who worked to claim gold weapons for their master, Lord Garmadon. History At an unknown moment in time, Underworld emerged as one of the sixteen realms, becoming intertwined with Ninjago, with fallen warriors who were unable to reconcile with their death arriving in the Underworld, becoming skeletal beings known as Skulkin. Over time, the population of the Underworld grew in size as battles continued to occur and warriors fell, with deceased animals becoming extensive versions of their remains upon their arrival. At one point, Samukai arrived in the Underworld after his death and became the leader of Skulkin. Samukai later clashed with the sons of the First Master Spinjitzu and was defeated. An underworldly takeover (flashback) Several Skulkin accompanied Samukai as having surrounded an angry Garmadon. From there, they began to see their master defeated and fell under Garmadon's command as a result. The last trip (flashback) Samukai, Kruncha and Nuckal resurrected Dr. Julien and imprisoned him in Lighthouse Prison, Samukai forcing him to create vehicles for Skulkin. He would also lock Leviathan there to prevent Julien from escape as a result. Later, Bonezai would continue to create Skull Truck and Turbo Shredder, while Chopov invented Skull Motorcycle. Ninja Way About a decade later,[2] Skulkin led an attack on the village of Ignacia, under Samukai. After engaging Kai in battle and attacked by Master Wu, they managed to kidnap Nya and retrieve the gold weapons map, calling for a retreat. Kai's destiny to become a ninja. Fortunately, Ninja restored the timeline somewhat by giving a Captured Nya to the skeletons, allowing their actions to continue on so should have, with a few select members observing strange phenomena that occurred as a result of time travel, though eventually making little of it. Later, while ambushing Ninja at the Forest of Silence, they probably clashed with Future Jay over the three gold weapons, losing against the experienced Ninja. As a result of the destruction of Mega Weapon, Skulkin's actions in the alternate timeline have been erased, along with any of their memories of it. Later, as events continued to deteriorate, Kulkin remained largely far outside Ninjago's business, with only a few selected members going out to interact with the living. Dark Island Trilogy, Part 3 After Clouse was exiled to the Underworld, several Skulkin converged on his position as he mourned his fate, ironically, in exactly the same location and the situation that Garmadon was in, as the day of the Departed A Samukai temporarily revived, with the help of Krazi and FrakJaw, went after Jay and his parents. However, they were defeated thanks to the ronin that appears in . C. to rescue. The Kaiju Wu and P.I.X.A.L. protocol attempt to open a portal to the Never Land. But the Traveler's Tea wasn't strong enough. At one point, a portal was opened to the Underworld, revealing Kulkin, their vehicles, and Lord Garmadon's Dark Fortress. In LEGO Universe (non-canon) Kulkin also appear in LEGO Universe, where they attack Spinjitzu Monastery and send it into space. The monastery collapses on Crux Prime, where Skulkin happens to be mining Maelstrom Hours for unknown purposes. Seeking to investigate the activities of the skeletons, Master Wu sends Ninja Imagination, Neido, to monitor Skulkin and stop their plans. The Skeleton Army layout is made up of skeleton figurines with trunk, leg, head, and arm parts. They wear belts and armor that is colored red, blue, gray, or white (their elementary colors). Generals have much larger heads than the usual skulkin, with different details on the scalps; has a row of spikes. Kruncha has a cap, and Wylash has a stallion to attach the head (although the straw hat fits best). Skulkin au au with screws printed on top of the chest. These trunks are new pieces with a colored belt, depending on the item (even if they are not elementary masters themselves). Skulkin have two types of weapons: regular weapons to hold weapons normally, and lateral weapons to hold weapons in one side for spinner fights. Both types of weapons are bent at the elbows. Unlike previous skeleton figures, The Skulkin warriors have black shoes, mainly to be able to sit on spinners. Skulkin wore different types of armor depending on their rank. Trooper armor has screws at the top and has metal over the chest with a Skulkin symbol. The sides have spikes over the shoulders, which are colored differently depending on the element. The generals have armor that has the Symbol Skulkin and bones connected by straps to the shoulder guards. The shoulder guards have colored spikes to represent elements (the only colors shown are gray and white, because only Kruncha and Wylash have them). Thanks to Samukai's unique design and high rank among Skulkin, he has a special armor. In pilot episodes, it's brown, but in Wrong Place, Wrong Time and in An Underworld Takeover it's white. Culture, traits, etc. In general, loose beings; Kulkin emphasized obedience, anger, cruelty and, bizarrely, stupidity as their main virtues. Described as mostly being made up of those who wanted to conquer Ninjago and warriors unable to reach an agreement with their death. Kulkin were quite chaotic, though not without some morals, because they opposed the mass destruction that would be caused by the Great Devourer. Skulkin also seemed to take a huge amount of interest in engineering, having created several vehicles and hiring the positions of a chief mechanic and inventor. As a result of their inability to marry their own death and also being excluded from the Kingdom of Pared, most Kulkin became extremely resentful and jealous of life, longing for their old life, and also became incredibly wild and uncontrollable in their excitement upon returning to Ninjago for the first time in countless years, , with their more serious commanders having to coll them in to keep them on track. In addition, as a result of their status as undead giving them a type of longevity, they had a strange perception of time, conceiving five thousand years to be a bit of experience. Despite their grudge against Lord Garmadon, Skulkin still had a certain honor, as they willingly swallowed their pride and anger for his betrayal to save countless lives, preventing the awakening of the Great Devourer. Also, following their alliance with Ninja, their members have become more lax and mischievous instead of simply villains, with most of their crimes arising from petty mistakes rather than cruel intent. Powers and Skills Due to their status as Skulkin has gained a great deal of longevity and a form of indestructibility, thanks to the technical point dead; However, the power of objects, would be the Golden Weapons was enough to eventually destroy their shapes. However, because they are undead, Skulkin did not need to eat, sleep, etc., although some members still wanted the luxury that came as a result of these needs. Their status as undead also left several of them mute, although some managed to overcome this handicap, especially senior members. In addition, Skulkin had the ability to divide their bones apart and have their parts acting independently of each other, allowing them to attack unsuspecting opponents and giving them a key advantage in battle. Also, their origins as fallen warriors have ensured each Skulkin at least some fighting skills and experience, although the skill level would vary. Following their alliance with Garmadon, several members were taught and Spinjitzu, albeit with different abilities and results. Therefore, they rarely used power during the fight because of their lack of skill. Vehicles Main Article: Skulkin Vehicles Trivia Word Skulkin seems to be a game on skulking, which means [keeping] out of sight, usually with a sinister reason or coward's. [3] Kulkin, led by Garmadon, was indeed preparing in the Underworld for about a decade for Garmadon's sinister plan to steal the Golden Weapons, unaware of the general population of Ninjago. They are also dishonored warriors, which means they were cowards and dishonored during their lifetime. The name is also based on the word skull. While Kruncha, Nuckal and Wywelsh are never explicitly named generals in the TV series, their superior status is implicit, such as when Krazi appoints Wylash as head of Return to the Fire Temple. Although the books indicate that they have elementary powers, this is not canon to the show. [4] There are many cases where Skulkin has the wrong armor or the color of the eyelid: the appearance of Samukai on the LEGO.com site is incorrectly colored blue instead of red. In some images, Wylash's armor has gray spikes instead of white ones. Chopov's armor tip changes color from time to time into sets (sometimes gray and sometimes red). Samukai has no armor due to its abnormal design, while Nuckal, despite being a general, has the same blue warrior armor as Krazi. This means that while warrior armor has four color variants, the general armor has only two, the ones being gray and white. Skulkin often appear after pilots, although mostly as small cameos. After Lord Garmadon severs his ties with them in the Darknesh he will rise, they appear only once in Everything Ninja. It seems that Kulkin were largely written from the series afterwards, leaving only Kruncha and Nuckal left. Skulkin's identity and role was left ambiguous until Tommy Andreasen commented Underworld in 2016. According to the 2011 edition of the Ninjago website, the Underworld is the fate of all living things,[necessary citation] needed] They make up all of Ninjago's deceased. In the Official Guide, though, Underworld is said to be where those who want to conquer Ninjago are sent. However, in Possession, it is established that the Cursed Land is where the wicked go, leaving again their roles in question. Finally, in 2016, Tommy Andreasen confirmed that the Underworld is only for warriors who have been dishonored in battle, explaining why all Skulkin are generally suitable and good fighters. [5] The Ninjago Site Museum offered a slightly different explanation, stating that the Underworld is the land of the dead, populated by fallen warriors who never realized or accepted their death. [6] In the series, the Skulkin generals acted visibly more comically than in their representations in other additional material, probably as comedy and to highlight the roles of Samukai and Garmadon as antagonists. The character drawings of the warriors (FrakJaw, Krazi, Chopov and Bonezai) were used to make generic soldiers in the TV series, appearing several times in the same photos, which will be seen again with serpentine. Bonezai's design was used to make generic soldiers in Lego Battles: Ninjago game. Clouse could have taken control of the underworld after his exile. [7] Their appearances are similar to Calaca in Central American culture. With the release of Ninjago: Legacy sets, Skulkin have been launched into LEGO sets for the first time since Day of the Departed. Skulkin with abnormal head forms could have been an early evolution of man when they were alive. [8] Tommy Andreasen most commonly writes the word Skulkin, as seen on Twitter[9] and in his non-canonical novel Way of the Departed. It was also written this way in the original script of the Hageman brothers for the pilot episodes. [10] The Skeleton Figurehead is the only Skulkin that has no bright red eyes in the eye sockets. Skulkin have a similar appearance to awakened Warriors, another army skeleton. Samukai is the only Skulkin known to have died twice, first as a man and again as a Skulkin. They were called Skeleton Warriors in an older version of the LEGO.com. [11] The faces of warriors resemble those of the skeleton warriors in the Lego's Castle theme (2007).
